

2ND SEMESTER SY 2021-2022

MA ELLT COURSE OFFERINGS

ENGL 203: EVALUATION PROCEDURES IN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE TEACHING

THU, 6:00-9:00pm

Ms. Irene Benitez

The course provides the students with the basic principles in English language testing inside the classroom, the latest trends in testing, and the five areas of second language assessment: reading comprehension, written expressions, listening comprehension, oral communication, and overall language proficiency. Particular attention is given to the construction of different types of tests used in evaluation and correction of teacher-made tests. Historical, theoretical, and practical viewpoints are combined to offer a thorough orientation to this crucial component of any language and literature curriculum.

ENGL 204: THEORIES AND PRACTICES OF WRITING

SAT, 8:00-11:00am

Mr. Michael Ian Benedict Estipona

The course provides the students with the basic principles in English language testing inside the classroom, the latest trends in testing, and the five areas of second language assessment: reading comprehension, written expressions, listening comprehension, oral communication, and overall language proficiency. Particular attention is given to the construction of different types of tests used in evaluation and correction of teacher-made tests. Historical, theoretical, and practical viewpoints are combined to offer a thorough orientation to this crucial component of any language and literature curriculum.

2ND SEMESTER SY 2021-2022

MA ELLT COURSE OFFERINGS

ENGL 208: SOCIOLINGUISTICS

SAT, 11:00-2:00pm

Dr. Ma. Isabel Martin

This course aims to study language in its social context through a wide range of empirical and ethnographic studies, both local and foreign. It presents to the students key concepts, theories and principles of sociolinguistics from both a historical and contemporary perspective. It also discusses important findings and empirical concerns of sociolinguistics that could be applied to language teaching and learning. At the end of the semester, the students are expected to come up with a research paper on any area of sociolinguistics applied to the Philippine setting.

ENGL 226: ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

TEACHING: ORAL PRESENTATION SKILLS FOR TEACHERS

SAT, 2:00-5:00pm

Dr. Maria Luz Elena Canilao

This 3-unit course reviews and applies principles of effective oral communication as used in academic and professional settings. It equips students with listening and speaking strategies and sets up functional opportunities for skills practice in active and purposeful listening for academic purposes, effective participation in dynamic group discussions and making more effective oral presentations.